

My employer (boss) is a sorted, practical and reliable person. He recognises my genuine work and efforts all the time. He is always asking the correct questions and co-creating wonderful opportunities for me to grow. He is secure of himself, his talent and other people working around him. He maintains and allows a proper organizational structure for all people to function efficiently. As I grow and seek a promotion, I am being guided by the Divine Intelligence present in him and me. I am open to growing in this company or any other company which is meant for my highest good. In this regards, my boss does his best what he can and supports me directly and indirectly. This situation is healing day by day and our relationship is getting better and better. I am blessed to have a boss like him who propels me to become the best version of myself.
